Chrysler to be killed off in European Market next year...

Chrysler will disappear completely from European car markets in 2011, company bosses have confirmed. In addition, Dodge will have only a niche role outside of its home market, while Jeep will become the company's sole international brand.

Fiat/Chrysler's five-year plan...

The new Chrysler 300C and new Voyager MPV will both be sold under the Lancia badge, according to a report from Automotive News Europe. Lancia will re-badge the 300C and sell it as a replacement for defunct Lancia. Lancia will also sell a version of the next-generation Sebring, effectively stepping in for Lybra, which went off sale in 2006. Lancia will also get a version of Chrysler's upcoming medium-size crossover. Fiat will sell re-badged Dodge models, according to the report. Fiat's big Croma hatch will be replaced by Dodge's new mid-sized car and the Dodge Journey crossover will step in for the ancient Ulysse MPV. There's no news on what will happen to Chrysler's European dealer network in light of the decision to concentrate on Jeep sales.

TRIVIA QUESTION OF THE MONTH...

Q: What was the brand of the first home air freshener that was tested at the Lion House of the Bronx Zoo?

MEMBER OF THE MONTH!

Hi, I'm Lani Beneveds. I have ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) and can't talk. I worked as an accountant before retiring in Jan. of 2009. I liked to work for non-profits. In the Bay area there was the Diocese of Oakland, Safe Alternative to Violent Environments, and Eden Area Housing. In the Seattle area I was with Sleep Country USA for seven years, then Dynamic Family in Kent.

I like to do quilting with my daughter Valerie. Stan and I go to motorcycle show and swaps. We like to travel. I have four children and five grandchildren. I've watched my grandchildren grow up to be very nice people. After owning 2 Neons and having them totaled, we bought me a navy blue PT Cruiser, a 2003.
